

Javier García

Vice-President

ISO

Javier García Díaz is the Director General of the Spanish Association for Standardization (UNE). He has an outstanding international recognition that is materialized in his various positions of responsibility in International and European standardization bodies.

He is currently Technical Vice-President of the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) and member of the Board of Directors of the European Committee for Standardization (CEN). During his professional career, he has been Technical Vice-President of the European Committee for Electrotechnical Standardization (CENELEC). He was also a member of the Technical Board of Standardization of the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC).

Javier García holds a degree in Chemical Sciences from the Universidad Complutense de Madrid and postgraduate degrees in Business Administration and Marketing Management, as well as a Master's Degree in Innovation Management. He completed diplomatic studies at the Spanish Ministry of Foreign Affairs.